

Remigijus Šalna

Dean of faculty of Civil Engineering of Vilnius Gediminas Technical university

Assoc Prof of Department of Reinforced Concrete Structures and Geotechnics

Remigijus Šalna is Associate professor of Vilnius Gediminas Technical University (since 2008), Dean of Faculty of Civil Engineering (since 2021), Vice-Dean for Studies (2011-2021), Member of University Senate (since 2010), Associate Professor in Department of Reinforced Concrete and Structures and Geotechnics. Since 2004 he has worked in various fields of study and research: development of study programmes, organization of the study process in faculty, accreditation of study programmes, expertise, organization of scientific conferences.

As a Dean is responsible for the activities of the Faculty of Civil Engineering, is an active member of the Faculty Council, the University Senate, and the head of many committees and working groups. Representing of the faculty/university in international organization European Civil Engineering Faculties (AECEF) (Board member since 2017), Lithuanian construction association (<https://www.statybininkai.lt/en/>, Board member, 2021).

As a Vice-Dean for Studies was responsible for organization, participation in various work groups, has an experience of creating and assessing study programmes, long term organizational work experience by being a part of administrative personnel of the university (member of various Study Comities in VILNIUS TECH and in state study programme evaluation committees (SKVC)).

Research interests include reinforced concrete mechanics and reliability. Remigijus Šalna has published over 40 publications and is a co-author of 1 patent. He is the editor of the university journal Engineering Structures and Technologies.

In his professional activities, he is a civil engineer, designer and expert of buildings, bridges and their structures (over 30 projects and examinations).